UWA code bootcamp gives opportunity to those who found a passion for programming, development and technology. I have a background in graphic design and a creative curriculum in high school. Which gave me experience in communicating creativity through a digital output. Since graduating from Mercy College, I have been incorporating technology to create in my personal life. Which enable me to be expose to an IT career, continuing my passion through technology as creative standpoint. I am constantly problem-solving, adapting and gaining knowledge in different software. That has developed into a passion for coding which led me to my current enrolment for UWA Coding Bootcamp.

This pathway aligns with my ambitions, driven to take the next step in my career and part way with the food service industry. As seen in my current enrolment with UWA Coding Bootcamp, I have initiative and action for change in my career.

Regarding my work experience in the food service industry. Provides me with exceptional customer service skills, self-discipline, independency, organisation, problem-solving skills and adapting to my environment and situations accordingly. Although I am quiet, my work experience provides me with a teamwork mindset showing communication and courtesy.

This opportunity is an ideal fit for me. Catapulting my career into the IT industry allows me to perform, improve and develop which couldn't flourish in my current food service industry—further motivating my path towards an IT career as a trainee.
